ABSTRACT

A server for use in a communications network implementing a routing function that serves multiple client NEs. The server interacts with a database storing true topology information corresponding to the client NEs. The routing function uses the true topology information in performing routing operations on behalf of the client NEs.